Fast-Track Masters to Ph.D. Application Form

Up to 15 credit hours of courses may be waived for work completed at the master's level or above, subject to review and approval by the Texts & Technology program director in consultation with the curriculum committee. Due to the rapidly changing nature of the field, courses older than 3 years from the date the student begins the PhD will generally not be considered.

The master's degree must have been earned at a regionally accredited institution or recognized foreign institution and the course substituted must have a clear theoretical and content alignment with the proposed usage in fulfilling program requirements, as evaluated by the Texts & Technology curriculum committee.

Students with master's degrees from UCF cannot "triple-dip" a course to satisfy degree requirements. For example, if a student chooses to take ENG 6814 to satisfy the Gender Studies Certificate and it is an elective for the English MA degree, it wouldn't be eligible for use in the Ph.D. as well.

To the Texts and Technology Program Director and Curriculum Subcommittee:

I hope this message finds you well. I am writing to formally request FastTrack status within T&T with the following credits, nine of which are from UCF's College of Humanities and Arts and are either T&T-specific courses or otherwise listed in the catalog as electives of either the Digital Humanities or Rhetoric/Composition specialization areas:
